

I love New Jersey's Do Not Call statute. I work about 70 hours a week and the last thing I want to hear when I get home late at night is my phone ring, most particularly from a telemarketer. I simply do not care whatsoever about the telemarketer's wants and concerns. If they want to communicate with me so badly let them send me a letter in the mail which I most surely will promptly toss w/ all the other garbage mail which clutters my mail box by advertisements. New Jersey should invoke a statute where constituents can sign up to prevent the junk mails we receive. I hope the government will not cowtow to the telecommunications for concern that they may go out of business and then the government will not realize the associated tax revenues. But alas, in all probability the special interest groups will come with their lobbies and the general public will again pay the price. New Jersey's existing statute is great. Please don't mess up a good thing. Thank you.
